Chapter 1 by Saurav Thakur

His looks may deceive you and you may disappoint him for reasons beyond your comprehension.

Introducing Arun a tall and fair complexioned guy who never ever gave a shit about others interests. It was all about him.

He will typically look at you as if you owed him gold. He will address you as if you are born to look up to him. But in reality he sucked big time!

He was a loser. Loser of the millennium.

Chapter 2 by Da'Najah

He thought he was the best he talked like he was the best, and he walked like he was the best. Everybody believed he was the best but one girl knew better.

Lacey didn't like the way he did things. She intended to tell him off. "Hey you!" She shouted. "Yeah you! You think your so much better than everybody else well..." When he turned around she melted under his eyes

Chapter 3 by intellikat

"A girl like you dare not utter a single syllable in my presence," said Arun and Lacey's heart flip-flopped. "Your eyes are too far apart and your hair is neither black nor brown. If I were to describe you to my mother, I would say 'less than homely.' The type of girl you read in the newspaper that she's died and you scratch your head for a minute trying to remember if you went to high school with her or not before quickly tossing the thought of her away and dropping your loose change on the ground. "NOTHING BUT UTTERLY FORGETTABLE" he said, finishing the assault.
